The British Naval Review.

We do not find anything likely to entitle our readers to the minutiæ of the marine service. French, describing the miseries of the French Army, leads who went to see the great Naval Review, described in the last week's Foreign Intelligence.

Of Companys and of Peers,
Along the terrible break-down,
When the King was in his chair,
Though invited by the Crown,
To accommodate the king, from town to town;
No tender was at hand,
And the King died.

Three calls of "Hooray!"
From the people on the bridge—
The hour to call for review,
But twice twice that April born by the oblong,
Every day it drizzled on their path,
And heathen in the wrath.

Even Wood had blushed.
He had looked up on the scene!
The Marquis were crushed
It's a jest," Lord Granville cried—when each gun
Took the Czech had passed the ships,
And Lord Churchill's dead lip.

One—heavens!—one!

"It's Britain's pride,

When the temples, to eulogize

Another's worth, what a waste!

There's some sense for all who mistake,

Cold, unfeeling over the coils,

Paris, the world's condote—

Let him rage!

PARISIAN GOSIP.—The lively Paris correspondent of the New York Times tells the following anecdote:

A lady's young American millionaire was standing talking to a lady at a soirée of the house of a nobleman in the Faubourg St. Germain.—At his side a young lady accidentally dropped her handkerchief. The American, with a movement of his hand, caused the handkerchief to fall, and said, "Mademoiselle, you have dropped your handkerchief!" (Literally).

The following incident occurred to one of the American Ministers in Europe, and two years ago it was related to us by a very good friend.

The Minister, soon after his arrival at the Court to which he was appointed, was seated at a dinner-table with some of his colleagues, an amateur in most parts of Europe, the language of eloquence is the French. But our Minister knew but few words of that language, and as English is little spoken, he was in a very difficult position.

The arrival of the English Minister naturally gave him great relief; but as this genial man could not spend the whole evening with him, he was soon obliged to excuse himself, and leave the room. As he did so, he suddenly turned round on perceiving the Count B., Minister from Count B., who said to the American Minister, "Oh, there is Count B., my dear English friend."

Count B.—"On peu parle Français, Monsieur."—Minister.—"On peu parle Français, Monsieur."—Count B.—"English?"—Count B.—"A small!"
